

Featured Project: Silvermills, Edinburgh

Stone Type: Sandstone

It is not often an entire streetscape is redeveloped at one time. In this instance in the Edinburgh New Town, we created a traditional façade to the residential south side, and a more contemporary style to the office redevelopment on the north side.

The stonework included rusticated and plain ashlar sandstone cladding with decorative string courses, entrance platts and steps.

The development has won several prestigious awards, including the 2006 Scottish Property Executive Residential Award for Excellence and the 2007 Saltire Society Award for Housing.

